A Guide on Proactive Disclosure for Public Entities at National and County Government Level in Kenya

(Constitution, 2010 Article 35(3) & Section 5, Access to Information Act, 2016)
Foreword

The Commission on Administrative Justice (Office of the Ombudsman) is established under Article 59(4) of the Constitution and the Commission on Administrative Justice Act, 2011, to enforce administrative justice in the public sector to address all forms of maladministration. The Commission has the mandate to oversee and enforce the implementation of the Access to Information Act, No. 31 of 2016, which requires all public entities and relevant private bodies to proactively disclose certain information to the public crucial for the promotion of democracy and good governance.

The Commission in partnership with the USAID AHADI program developed this guide on Proactive Disclosure for Public Entities at National and County Government Level in Kenya.

This document sets out the processes and practices to help agencies comply with the Access to Information Act, 2016 and particularly with the requirements of proactive disclosure. This guide will assist public institutions to provide information proactively, even as we await the regulatory framework to be developed for implementation of the Act.

This guide is key and timely at this point in our nation’s history when there is a convergence of minds concerning conclusively dealing with some challenges experienced in governance. It will enhance transparency and accountability, which are key elements of good governance to help realise our collective vision as a nation. Users will also find it useful to refer to a sister publication, developed by the Commission, on best practices in the implementation of the Access to Information Act, 2016.

Signed this 27th day of August 2018

HON. FLORENCE KAJUJU,
MBS CHAIRPERSON OF THE COMMISSION
Acknowledgements

We appreciate the valuable work, time, material, intellectual and professional support of everyone who participated and contributed to the development of this guide. First and foremost to the Commissioners of CAJ led by the Chairperson Hon. Florence Kajuju & Commissioners Washington Sati (Vice Chairperson) and Lucy Ndungu (Access to Information Commissioner) for their visionary leadership and guidance. The Commission Secretary Leonard Ngaluma, gratuitously provided the requisite technical leadership and resource support.

The Commission wishes to express its gratitude to the U.S Agency for International Developments (USAID), Agile and Harmonized Assistance for Devolved Institutions (AHADI) program, a key partner of the Commission, for its generosity providing resource and support for the whole process. We acknowledge, with much gratitude, the role of AHADI team lead and the entire AHADI team. Special mention also goes to the able consultant Dr. Faith Kabata who translated the ideas into this worthy guide.

Many thanks to Vincent Chahale, Director of Legal & Advisory who worked tirelessly from conception of the idea and resource mobilization to realisation of the guide.

Lastly, we thank the entire CAJ team and our many stakeholders for their continued support, input and partnership.

1.0 Overview
This guide clarifies the concept of proactive disclosure and provides a framework that public entities can use to meet the requirements of proactive disclosure under the Kenyan Constitution, 2010 and the Access to Information Act, 2016.

2.0 Scope and Applicability
The Guide applies to all public entities in both the national and county governments.

3.0 Meaning of Proactive Disclosure and Rationale
Proactive disclosure means public entities continually making information available without waiting for public requests. It is active transparency. All public entities are required to administratively and as a matter of course release information to the public, without the necessity of formal applications. The affirmative disclosure obligation not only requires public entities to proactively disclose information but also to update that information before January of the year it was first disclosed.

3.1 Rationale for Proactive Disclosure
The rationale for proactive disclosure is to satisfy the public demand for routine information while reducing the administrative burden associated with processing information requests. Additionally, proactive disclosure increases transparency hence public confidence in public entities.

4.0 Context and Background of Proactive Disclosure in Kenya
4.1 Constitution, 2010
Article 35(3) Constitution, 2010 provides:

‘The State shall publish and publicize any important information affecting the nation.’

This provision thus places an obligation on the State to proactively disclose any information affecting the nation. The provision is further elaborated and concretized by the Access to Information Act, which requires public entities to make certain categories of information available to the public.

4.2 Access to Information Act, 2016
Section 5 of the Act requires all public entities to voluntarily disclose certain information and to facilitate access to the information.

5.0 Commencement
The requirements on proactive disclosure are effective from 21st September 2017.
6.0 Information to be Proactively Disclosed

Section 5 of the Access to Information Act requires public entities to proactively disclose the following broad categories of information:

The above categories represent the minimum statutory requirements of proactive disclosure.
Best practices from other jurisdictions point to categories of information that may be released under the proactive disclosure:

i. Frequently requested records category – this refers to records released by way of information requests under Sections 9-11 of the Access to Information Act which the public entity determines are likely to be subject of subsequent requests; and

ii. Records that are of significant public interest provided such records do not fall within exempted information under Section 6 of the Access to Information Act.²

7.0 Providing Information

7.1 Contact details

Public entities should provide the name and contact details of the information access officer for enquiries or guide how the information is to be availed.³

7.2 Mode of access

The Act provides that at minimum, proactively disclosed information is to be made available through:

- On the internet provided the materials are held in electronic format.
- Inspection at no charge.
- Supplying copies for which charges may be imposed for copying and supplying; and.⁴

The most preferable mode of availing proactively disclosed information is through the public entity’s website through a direct link to the document.

7.2.1 Access on the Internet

The information should be easy to locate on the public entity’s website:

- Through access to Information link on the public entity’s homepage.
- Through the public entity’s search function.
- If not possible to have it on the home page, then in a logical manner for instance in the ‘About us’ link.⁵

The most preferable means of access is through access to Information link on the public entity’s homepage.

If a person is unable to access to online publication, the public entity should provide the information through alternative modes of access.

7.2.2 Access through inspection

The inspection requirement is satisfied by providing the public with access to the designated documents automatically, at no charge and without information requests. This could be carried out in citizen information centres in public entities.

7.2.3 Access through copies

If information is only available in hard copy, a summary describing the documents should be posted on the public entity’s website together with details of accessing the information whether through copies and the related charges.
7.3 Proactive disclosure in local settings (low internet penetration, low literacy levels, rural areas)

The Access to Information Act requires information shall be disseminated taking into consideration the need to reach persons with disabilities, costs, local language and the most effective method in this local area.

In areas of low Internet penetration, low literacy levels and rural settings, proactive disclosure could be through notice/information boards, mobile alerts, and writing on walls, public announcements and media broadcast.

7.4 Fees and charges

Proactively disclosed information is to be made available at no cost.

Charges should only be imposed to cover the cost of photocopying and supplying the information and should be justified and limited to the actual costs set out in the Access to Information Act (Regulations).

8.0 Updating Information

The affirmative disclosure obligations require public entities not only to maintain information but also to update the information.

The Access to Information Act requires public entities to update proactively disclosed information before January following the initial publication of information.

9.0 Rights of Vulnerable Groups (persons with disability, women, youth, marginalized populations illiterate persons)

Public entities should ensure that the information disclosed is accessible and usable by vulnerable groups in the population at no extra cost or at a cost taking into account the medium used.

Best practices in this area include public entity websites that enable persons with visual disability to navigate. (Kakamega County).
10.0 Complaints
The Act mandates the Commission on Administrative Justice to receive complaints or act on its motion to review decisions by a public entity’s refusal to proactively publish information.\(^8\)

11.0 Information not Subject to Proactive Disclosure
The broad categories of information not subject to disclosure include information whose disclosure is likely to:

- Undermine national security.
- Impede the due process of law.
- Endanger the safety, health or life of any person.
- Violate the privacy of an individual, other than the applicant.
- Substantially prejudice commercial interests
- Cause substantially harm to the ability of the Government to manage the economy.
- Damage a public entity’s position in actual or contemplated legal proceedings.
- Infringe professional confidentiality.
- Significantly undermine a public or private entity’s ability to give adequate and judicious to a matter that is pending a final decision and is actively under consideration.

Notwithstanding the above-listed grounds, the Act imposes an absolute requirement of disclosure in the public interest.

12.0 Reporting Obligations
The Act requires Public Entities to submit annual reports to the Commission on Administration Justice concerning the implementation of the Act, which includes reports on the information proactively disclosed and updated.\(^9\)

13.0 Sanctions
Section 14(3) of the Act mandates the Commission on Administrative Justice on its motion or upon a request by any person to review a decision of a public entity refusing to publish information that it is proactively required to disclose. The decision of the Commission is binding and may require the public entity to publish the information, pay compensation or any other lawful remedy.
